

TOPICAL MAPPING OF ACADEMIC PUBLICATIONS ON SOCIAL ASPECTS OF COVID-19

DEBORAH LUPTON, VITALITIES LAB, UNSW SYDNEY

Preamble

COVID-19 was proclaimed a pandemic by the World Health Organization on 11 March 2020. On 29 March, I published a piece on Medium entitled ‘Social Research for a COVID and Post-COVID World: An Initial Agenda’ and had begun work on my own COVID-related research projects. I have been attempting to keep abreast of other social researchers’ work that has been published since.

The rapid topical mapping of academic publications on social aspects of COVID-19 presented in this document covers the first wave of this literature in the English language. It is current as of 19 July 2020. Publications are all from the peer-reviewed literature published in social science journals and those listed reflect my own interest in qualitative, critical and theoretically oriented research. I have not attempted to systematically comb through the medical and public health journals, for example, although doubtless there has been some important social research published in these journals too. Therefore, no claims are made as to completeness, but this document does at least provide some indication of what social researchers have been thinking and writing about in the early stages of the COVID crisis.
